Are pets allowed?

We ask that you do not bring your pet to the rally unless it is a working animal. While most owners are considerate and careful, in large crowds the mess an animal can make creates public health and cleanliness issues. In addition, other spectators, especially children, may be fearful of animals. Please leave your pets at home.

The Balloonist's Prayer

May the winds welcome you with softness.
May the sun bless you with his warm hands.
May you fly so high and so well that God joins you in laughter and sets you gently back into the loving arms of Mother Earth.

The author of the Balloonist's Prayer is unknown, but it is believed to have been adapted from an old Irish sailors' prayer from long ago. This prayer is commonly heard before a balloon flight.

DEC ANNOUNCES CONSIDERATIONS FOR FRESHWATER SPORTFISH REGULATION CHANGES

Anglers Are Encouraged to Review and Comment on Potential Changes

Proposed changes to the current freshwater fishing regulations were announced today by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC). Based on the status of existing fish populations and discussions with anglers, fisheries biologists, and fisheries managers over the past year, DEC had identified potential changes to fishing regulations and is seeking additional angler feedback.

Changes being considered would adjust angling regulations to enhance angling experiences and enjoyment, consistent with the status of fish populations. Many changes under consideration are focused on eliminating special regulations that did not achieve their intended purpose.

Some highlights for trout anglers include: increasing year-round trout fishing opportunities at specifically chosen streams, adjusting daily creel limits and minimum size limits on select waters to help distribute larger size trout among anglers, and establishing catch and release fishing at a few additional streams.

Warmwater angling highlights include: increasing the statewide minimum size limit for muskellunge and eliminating certain daily creel and minimum size limits for walleye that were temporarily established as part of DEC’s multi-year effort to establish walleye populations in candidate waters. Among a number of other changes being considered are adjustments to gear and equipment allowed to be used for angling.

Based on public feedback and after further evaluation this summer, DEC will advance proposals that will likely result in enhanced fisheries and fishing opportunity and have angler acceptance. They will be made available for formal public comment in accordance with State Administrative Procedures Act. At this time, DEC is soliciting initial feedback on what may be proposed later this year. Input will be accepted through August 16.

DEC welcomes and encourages feedback on the regulation changes currently under consideration. To view these potential changes and to provide input, visit the DEC website at <http://www.dec.ny.gov/outdoor/91959.html> Hard copies of the list of changes being considered, as well as instructions on how to submit feedback by regular mail, can be obtained by contacting Shaun Keeler, at New York State DEC, Bureau of Fisheries, 625 Broadway, Albany, NY 12233-4753. f

CREATE YOUR OWN SOUTHWESTERN/PRAIRIE GARDEN IN NEW YORK STATE
By: Carol Sitariski, Cornell University Cooperative Extension Master Gardener

Tired of the same old gardens with flowers, bushes, and mulch? Why not create a Southwestern/Prairie garden. It takes some work initially, but it is well worth it in the end as you will have something totally different from your neighbors and a garden that won't require weeding if done properly. Using xeric plants (plants that require little water) will keep watering down to a minimum.

How can you create this in your backyard?

- Start by surveying your yard for a sunny spot, one with at least 7 to 10+ hours of sunlight is best.
- Once you find the perfect sunny spot, use a garden hose, rope or spray marking paint to layout your shape and size. (Hint, a curved design mimics nature.)
- When you are happy with your design, thoroughly remove all grass and weeds from this area. This is the most important part; if not done properly you will have weeds or grass popping up and trust me you don't want that! I know from experience; it cost me a lot of extra work. There are several ways to accomplish grass/weed removal:

- manually remove the grass (too much work for me),
- place cardboard, dark plastic or landscape fabric over the area; be sure to anchor it down so the wind won't blow it away. This method takes the longest; you will need to leave your material in place for almost a year to kill off the grass or weeds,
- the easiest way is to use a vegetation killer that can be purchased at any garden or home improvement store. Follow the label directions carefully to protect you and the environment,
- Now that all the vegetation is dead within your design area, you put a garden edge around the area and lay down a good weed barrier, plastic is a good choice. I find the best garden edge is one that sits on top of the ground and uses stakes to hold it in place. This is less work as you don't have to dig and is easy to install, especially on curves.
- It is time to pick out the type of stone you want to use for the garden bed. You can go to a garden store to see what they have available or go online to look at choices. You will want a smaller size of stone or you can even use sand/gravel. If you are not sure how much stone you will need, you can ask the stone company; just provide them with the size of your garden and the depth of no less than two inches, (more is better) and they can give you an amount. Spreading the stone is the hardest part of this garden, get some friends to help and have a cookout afterwards!
- The fun part, finally! Picking out your plants. Remember, you will need to get plants suitable for this type of micro climate as the stones create a hot, dry area. Select a few ornamental grasses of varying sizes and colors. Diversify this with other plants suited for this type of garden; some even resemble cactus plants. You might like eryngium (sea holly) which is a lovely shade of blue with stiff branching stems and thistle type flower heads. Another plant is sempervivum (hens and chicks or stone crop), these come in various colors and shapes resembling cactus. You could even add some flowering plants such as rudbeckia, but you don't want them in large clumps as you want a wildflower effect. The list goes on and on, but a good place to start is a nursery garden center where you can ask if specific plants they have can tolerant heat and dryness. There are quite a few local garden & nursery centers that have an excellent selection of xeric plants in Western New York and the Southern Tier area. Want some ideas, go online or look through catalogs that specialize in xeric plants for inspiration.

- Once you have your plants placed in their new setting, you can add other touches such as various size/shape rocks (make sure you dig them in slightly to give a natural look), or you can take a trip to the lake and pick up some driftwood. I added a small water bath for birds as they will be attracted to this area.

Sit back with a glass of herbal tea and admire your handiwork, you will have earned a rest. Remember this garden only requires watering during dry spells, there is no weeding required and another bonus is leaving the grasses will provide winter interest in your landscape. f

WORK LIVE POSITIVE
Dr. Joey Faucette
ListenToLife.org

Do you see the obvious?
Someone called me recently and said that he'd read one of my books, that he'd really enjoyed it, and had started listening to his own life.
"What's going on in your life now that you're listening to?" I asked him.
"Well," he said, "just the other day I went to a new service station in town. It's one of those pay-at-the-pumps places. I put my credit card in okay, but I couldn't make the pump come on.
"So I went inside and asked the cashier what to do. She said for me to press the PRESS HERE button.
"When I went back to the pump, there it was in huge letters, PRESS HERE. I did, and the pump came on and everything was great...
"...except I felt really dumb after missing the sign. But then I said to myself, 'Hey, Dr. Joey said to listen to life and make a positive life.' So I did.
"And I realized that's what listening to life is all about. Life teaches us everything we need to know and it's so obvious, but we miss it. That's why listening is so important."

VOLUNTEERS SOUGHT FOR STREAM AND RIVER MONITORING

Wadeable Assessments by Volunteer Evaluators (WAVE) Project is Launching its 2013 Season

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) is actively recruiting citizen scientists to collect biological samples from streams and rivers in the Genesee, Delaware, Hudson, and Mohawk River watersheds as part of the Wadeable Assessments by Volunteer Evaluators (WAVE) project to assess water quality.

WAVE data are used to augment the work of the DEC Stream Biomonitoring Unit, which samples streams and rivers across the state to create an inventory of stream water quality. Citizen Monitors will provide valuable information to assist in identifying healthy stream sites and flagging sites that potentially have water quality concerns. These data are included in federal and state water quality reports and help to target professional assessments and local restoration efforts where they are most needed.

If six or more of the "Most Wanted" organisms are found, the stream segment is assessed as having no known impacts and fully supporting aquatic life. If mostly "Least Wanted" organisms are found, then the stream segment will be flagged for possible investigation by professionals.

Training sessions are scheduled for July and August at locations in Livingston Manor, Sullivan County (July 15, Aug. 7, Aug. 21), Bainbridge, Chenango County (July 16, Aug. 20), Port Jervis, Orange County (July 17, Aug. 6), Angelica, Allegany County (July 29, Aug. 13), Castile, Wyoming County (July 30, Sept. 5), and Scottsville, Monroe County (Aug. 12, Sept. 4).
